

What's the story?

Global Land is a low middle-income country, reopening progressively its borders after a stringent 4-months lockdown in the previous year due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The country recently received the organization of a big regional sports event that will draw many tourists and supporters from surrounding countries. To prepare the country for this mass-gathering event, the government is setting-up a planning committee that will oversee the organization of the tournament while addressing outstanding health issues and managing the evolving COVID-19 situation.

The government wants to use the opportunity provided by the organization of the hand-ball tournament to attract attention to the country, bringing new investors and increasing revenues in the tourism sector, boosting its popularity in view of national parliamentary elections to be held in 18 months from the start of the game.

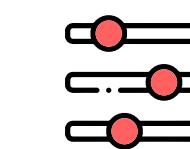

It's a game

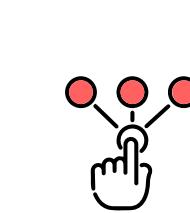

Played in teams where 2-3 participants per team will discuss options and make decisions to reach the goal of the game

Digital/adaptable to face-to-face workshops

With indicators and scoring included in the interface

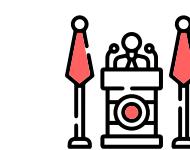

With three different endings 1. winning the game with a successful tournament, 2. intermediate end with the tournament happening with no attendees and 3. game over with cancelation of the tournament

It's a learning tool

Target Audience

National IHR Focal Points, IHR Stakeholders & Public Health officials, WHO IHR Contact Points (V 2.0)

Member States' Ministry officials and senior managers (V 2.2)

Universities in health-related program (V 2.2)

Goal

Gamers must prepare the country for the possibility of a future health emergency (disease outbreak or natural disaster) while addressing on-going health related challenges with the goal to organize a successful mass gathering event

In their decision-making process, gamers will be invited to consider how they will integrate the concepts of multi sectoral collaboration, multi-lateral coordination, and building trust to achieve a satisfying result.